POPE FRANCIS: ECUMENICAL ENCOUNTER

Closing an ecumenical encounter with Christian leaders from the Middle East, Pope Francis on Saturday said that "truces maintained by walls and displays of power will not lead to peace," only a concrete desire to engage in dialogue will work.

He also called for an end to the region being used for "gains that have nothing to do with the Middle East," and demanded that Christians are treated as "full citizens." "With deep anguish, but with constant hope, we turn our gaze to Jerusalem, a city for all peoples, a unique and sacred city for Christians, Jews and Muslims the world over," Francis said, calling for the status quo to be respected, as it has been decided by the international community and "repeatedly requested by the Christian communities of the Holy Land." The term "status quo" in the context of Jerusalem refers to an agreement among the various Christian churches of the city regulating control and access to holy sites. According to the pontiff, only a negotiated solution between Israelis and Palestinians, which has to be "firmly willed and promoted by the international community," will lead to lasting peace and guarantee the "coexistence of two states for two peoples."

The pope's words came at the closing of an ecumenical encounter he hosted in the southern Italian city of Bari, a pilgrimage site for both Catholics and Orthodox, often described as the ecumenical city par excellence. The leaders came together under the motto "Peace be upon you! Christians together for the Middle East."

Standing next to the heads or representatives of several Orthodox churches, Oriental Orthodox churches, the Assyrian Orthodox church, members of Catholic Oriental churches, a representative for the Lutheran church, and one for the Middle East Council of Churches, Francis said that the group had committed itself to "walking, praying and working together, in the hope that the art of encounter will prevail over strategies of conflict."

CALCUTTA STATIONS MISSION

The St Joseph's Parish overseas outreach program, Calcutta Stations Mission is pleased to announce that the Teacher Training Scholarship Program has four new Candidates. This Program identifies young women from poor backgrounds who have successfully completed their secondary schooling and provides a much-needed scholarship to complete their tertiary studies in Primary Teaching at the Loreto Teaching College in Kolkata. Over the years we have seen twenty girls graduate, resulting in life changing gainful employment lifting whole families out from the cycle of poverty. These girls can go on to fund further education for themselves, their siblings and often move their families to a better and safer standard of living. Actual examples include: moving out of a house where the roof constantly leaks on to bedding or finding accommodation with a floor space that is larger than three square metres for a family of six. We wish to thank the parish for its past and on-going support. If you wish to sponsor or donate towards a scholarship candidate, please visit our website www.calcuttastationsmission.com.
